Section 137, Pages 4081 - 4110

This seventeen volume series is the first serial published by the Kansas State Historical Society from 1875 until 1928. The publication of the Kansas Historical Quarterly followed in 1931. Volumes 1-10 were officially titled the "Transactions of the Kansas State Historical Society." The title changed to "Collections of the..." beginning with volume 11. The series contains addresses and papers delivered at the annual meetings, biographical sketches, compiled historical information, and transcriptions of select collections in the Historical Society's holdings. The first seven volumes contain biennial reports of the board of directors. Beginning with volume 8 the biennial reports were published separately. Searchable tables of contents and indexes for each volume are forthcoming.

In Albert R. Greene's paper, "United States Land-offices in Kansas," page 5, eighteenth line from bottom of the page, read he went away singing, instead of "we." And on page 13, seventh line from end of article, read general land-office, instead of "central"; and in the line following, read office for "position."

In W. E. Richey's paper, entitled "Early Spanish Explorations and Indian Implements in Kansas," page 159, foot-note, "E. R. Sharpe, Notary Public," should read E. R. Thorpe, Notary Public. Page 166, first line under plate 4, instead of "diamond-pointed knives," read diamond-shaped knives.

Page 171, foot-note, James Richard Mead was born in Newhaven, Vt., instead of New Haven, Conn.

John Elmore McKeighan, referred to by Anna Heloise Abel, page 108, and C. E. Cory, page 191, located in 1868 at Baxter Springs, where he remained until 1871, when he removed to Fort Scott and became a partner with H. C. McComas. Five years later he removed to St. Louis, Mo., where the firm continued business until the tragic death of Mr. McComas, wife, and son, as told on page 191. He has since been identified with some of the strongest legal firms in that city. Mr. McKeighan was born near Farmington, Ill., July 20, 1841. His father was a native of county Antrim, Ireland, where he was born in 1816, and his mother was born three years later, in Cincinnati, Ohio. His earlier years were spent on a farm. He entered Knox College, at Galesburg, Ill., and from there he went to the University of Michigan, from which institution he graduated in 1866. He read law with Martin Shellenberger, at Toulon, and was admitted to the supreme court of Illinois in 1867, afterwards settling at Bolivar, Polk county, Mo. His father was one of the free-soilers and abolitionists of Illinois, but after the civil war the son became a Democrat. Mr. McKeighan married, June 2, 1869, Ellen M. Cutler, of Kalamazoo, Mich. Her father was Thomas C. Cutler, who became a Kansan and died at Newton, Kan., in 1893, at the advanced age of ninety-three. Mrs. McKeighan died in 1893, and on August 1, 1899, Mr. McKeighan married Mrs. Ida P. Hunt.

In the running-head, top of pages 199, 201, 203, and 205, read James C. Horton for "John C. Horton."

O. E. Morse, the author of the paper entitled "An Attempted Rescue of John Brown from the Charlestown, Va., Jail," has been a resident of Linn county since 1857. He was born in Huron county, Ohio, March 27, 1837. He located at the historic town of Moneka and engaged in merchandising until 1861, when he enlisted in company D, Fifth Kansas cavalry, and served until September, 1864, when he was mustered out a captain. He located in Mound City and engaged in the furniture business, in which he continued until 1873. In this year he was appointed deputy county treasurer. In 1874 he engaged in farming and breeding fine stock. In 1875-'76 he represented his district in the state legislature. In 1878 he was appointed commissioner to select school-lands. In October, 1864, in Livingston, N. Y., he was married to Emma Wattles.

William E. Webb, one of the founders of Hays City, wrote a book entitled "Buffalo Land." On page 51 he says: "While in Topeka our party made the acquaintance of Tenacious Gripe, a well-known Kansas politician, and who attached himself to us for the trip. Every person in the state knew him, had known him in territorial times, and would know him until either the state or he ceased to be." He had served in the upper and lower house of the state legislature, and at this time was a moderate Democrat. On page 419 is the following:

"Drawing fresh inspiration from his success, Gripe devoted another hour to an account of the many struggles in Kansas against these 'mean whites.' He gave us many descriptions of the time when men died that their children might live. Among other relations was that of the expedition under Montgomery to rescue the two companions of old John Brown from the prison at Charlestown, Va., a short time after the stern hero himself had there been hung.

"The dozen of brave Kansas men interested in the enterprise reached Harrisburg, with their rifles taken apart and placed in a chest, and sent scouts into Virginia and Maryland. It was the middle of winter, and deep snow covered the ground. They intended when passing among the mountains to bear the character of a hunting party. Every member of that little band was willing to push on to Charlestown, notwithstanding the whole state of Virginia was on the alert, and pickets were thrown out as far as Hagerstown, Md. The plan was by a bold dash to capture the jail, and then, with the rescued men, make rapidly for the seaboard. Although the expedition failed, it gave the world a glimpse of that heroic Western spirit which was not only willing to do battle upon its own soil, but content to turn back and meet death half-way when comrades were in danger. Gripe did not accompany the expedition."

We are deprived of the knowledge of whom Gripe was.

The Kaw Indian name in lines 21 and 22, page 248, should be Kah-he-ga-wa-ti-an-gah, to correspond with spelling on page 206.

See the story of Satank, the Kiowa chief, in Robert M. Wright's "Frontier Life in Southwest Kansas," pages 48 and 49, volume 7 of the Historical Collections, in connection with the last paragraph of J. R. McClure's "Taking the Census and Other Incidents in 1855," pages 227-250, this volume.

Noble L. Prentis, in the Atchison Champion, September, 1880: "The capitol square is surrounded by a dense growth, rods in width, of rampant sunflowers. They grow as big, rank and yellow as if they were forty miles from a house. The sunflower ought to be made the emblem of our state. Nothing checks it or kills it. It is always 'happy as a big sunflower.' Grasshoppers have never held the age on it; and in droughty times, when everything else wilts and throws up its hands, the sunflower continues business at the old stand. It probably has some private arrangement with nature for securing 'aid.'"

Note by D. W. Wilder: "On page 208 of the Great Seal paper, my last aspera should have been asp Era, the way in which Kansas usually and incorrectly pronounces as'-pera."

From the National Tribune, April 10, 1904.

"Editor National Tribune: In the National Tribune of December 10, 1903, I noticed an article from Geo. W. Bowers, New Philadelphia, Ohio, on the death of the mother of the infamous outlaw, Quantrill, in which appears a statement that he was mortally wounded by one of Gen. E. H. Hobson's command, and shortly afterwards died in a hospital at Louisville, Ky. I have not yet seen any correct accounts of the manner and by whom he was captured, as I understand it. In the month of February, 1865, Quantrill and his band were reported to be in the vicinity of Lebanon, Ky. By order of Gen. John M. Palmer, then in command of the department of Kentucky, I drew 100 guns, equipments and ammunition from the arsenal at Jeffersonville to equip 100 men from Park barracks, who were sent under a lieutenant to capture Quantrill and his band. This was a failure, of course, for when they got where he was, like the Irishman's flea, he 'worn't there.' There were so many rebel sympathizers there that he was posted as soon as a union soldier appeared; therefore, another kind of strategy had to be adopted.

"Under instructions from General Palmer, I found a man who knew Quantrill in Kansas, who found thirty more men willing to undertake to capture him, dead or alive, as the necessity of the case might require. These scouts (all citizens, no soldiers) were instructed to be a band of guerrillas; to live off the community where they were scouting, and to assume the garb of genuine guerrillas, that they might gain the confidence of Quantrill and his band, and by that means capture him. This they were entirely successful in doing, and in the scrap which followed Quantrill was wounded in the back, much as Garfield was, three or four of his men killed, and as many more wounded.

"Captain Terrill, who was in command of these scouts, reported May 10, 1865, at General Palmer's headquarters, with Quantrill in a wagon on a straw bed. He was sent to a hospital in the southwest part of the city, where he died about six weeks later, and the company was paid off and discharged on the above date. The names of the men comprising the company appear in my reports to the third auditor of the treasury for the months of April and May, 1865, signed by themselves, on their pay-roll. A copy is herewith enclosed. (Signed) J. M. RIDLON, first lieutenant and quartermaster Twenty-fifth Michigan, and A. A. Q. M., headquarters, Department of Kentucky."

"[The document which Lieutenant Ridlon sends us is a very interesting one. It is the roll-call of the thirty-one men who went as scouts on the expedition, and were employed in it from the 1st until May 10, 1865. The chief was Edwin Terrell. His lieutenants were John H. Thompson and Horace Allen. The chief received fifty dollars a month for his services, and the lieutenants thirty-five and thirty dollars, respectively. The document is a report of their services, and the expenditure of money on them, and is signed on honor by Lieutenant Ridlon, and vouched for by Gen. John M. Palmer, major-general commanding the Department of Kentucky.—EDITOR National Tribune.]"

Page 504 read Fremont's Orchard, instead of "Tremont's."

The name of the first United States marshal of Kansas territory (page 120) should be spelled Israel B. Donaldson, according to a letter addressed by him to Geo. W. Deitzler and L. M. Greene, dated Lecompton, May 15, 1856, and now in the possession of the Historical Society. John Donaldson, territorial auditor, spelled his name the same way.

May 9, 1904, J. B. Dickerson, who was given a federal judgeship in the Indian Territory, resigned as judge of the eighth judicial district, and on the 10th of May R. L. King, county attorney of Marion county, was appointed district judge to succeed him (see page 513).

Mathew P. Simpson, judge of the district court for the ninth district (page 513) was killed by an automobile May 10, 1904, seven miles from Newton.

Robert Morris Peck (page 484) was born in Washington, Mason county, Ky., October 30, 1839. He now resides in Los Angeles, Cal. His father was William Peck, a Virginia horse-dealer, and his mother Rebecca Desha Peck, nee Ellis, Irish and Pennsylvania Dutch. Her maternal ancestors, the Overfields, emigrated to Kentucky from Pennsylvania about 1820, in the days of Daniel Boone and Simon Kenton, with both of whom the grandmother was acquainted.
