

English Gunflints from Fool Chief's Village, 14SH305

These six gunflints are just a few of those recovered during excavations at Fool Chief's Village, a Kansa village in Shawnee County. These gunflints were all quarried and manufactured in southern England. The top row of gunflints were likely used in a pistol and both have a single dorsal arris. Those on the bottom row have two dorsal arrises. Fool Chief's Village was the site of the 2012 Kansas Archeology Training Program field school, though excavations continued into 2013.
